Monday -
Today I started with preparing my case files for the week. I pulled them out and went over treatment plans that still need to be done. At 10:00 am I had an intake, and it was intense. In the middle of the intake the child started beating on his mother and we had to separate them. I believe that I handled this situation to the best of my ability. My heart broke for this whole family and how messy their situation is. After this, my 11:00 am was a no-show. I was not feeling well so I left shortly after this and went home.

Wednesday -
Today was a full and busy day. I started it off with meeting with a client who I haven't seen for two weeks. I was so proud of my client and loved talking with her. It really seemed like she is becoming more and more comfortable with me and opening up more with each session. After this I went into supervision with my supervisor. We discussed each of my cases and she helped me come up with a game plan on what to do next. I had appointments for the rest of the afternoon. The more I meet with my

I will not lie, my 5:00 pm cancelled and I felt a bit of relief. Is that bad? He is my toughest case and I was okay that his parents called and cancelled today's appointment. After meeting intake to do. This intake went well and I had sat in with this family previously when their other child first came to see us at the CAC. I finalized all but one of my treatment plans this week and spent the last hour filing claims,
