Case 1

by Karissa Goodman - Tuesday, April 21, 2020, 6:10 PM

I would diagnose Kyle with Mild Childhood-Onset Conduct Disorder with Limited Prosocial Emotions 312.81 (F91.1).

Kyle fits the diagnostic criteria because he shows aggression and has been seen to bully other kids, has had problems with stealing, as well as problems with being truant from school. I diagnosed this as child-onset because these behaviors were happening prior to the age of 10. He shows a lack of remorse or guilt for his actions, lacks empathy, as well as does not care about his performance. I diagnosed this as mild because there are not many conduct problems in excess of those required to meet the criteria.
