2.2
This week I presented myself as a learner as I engaged with several Georgia agencies and organizations who might help a student's mother with a housing problem. I tried to call different phone numbers to reach an understanding of what resources are available in Georgia and are potential pieces of help for this specific client. I learned quite a few things about different options offered to Georgia residents as well as Chattanooga residents.

3.2
This week I sent out letters to parents of students who are financially vulnerable and might be interested in participating in something Chickamauga does annually. We want to offer some help for the holiday season, since this is a time that puts a strain on families who want to provide gifts for their children. I searched to find out what families need help and what contact we should use to reach them. In this way, I engaged in an opportunity to advance economic justice to those families who are less fortunate than others this holiday season.
